

Approved by Iowa State Faculty Senate
March 5, 2002

Whereas, the Honors Building at Iowa State University, presently under construction, is to be named the Martin C. Jischke Honors Building, and

Whereas, the manner in which the building was named is controversial, and

Whereas, the policy of Iowa State University is that buildings not be named after an ex-university official for at least five years after the official leaves the university,

Therefore, be it resolved, that the Faculty Senate opposes the naming of the Honors Building after Martin Jischke at this time, and

Further, that the Faculty Senate supports naming the honors building the "Honors Building", which some time in the future could be renamed, and

Further, that the Faculty Senate request that the Board of Regents allow the President of the Faculty Senate, and other faculty members to address the Regents concerning this matter as soon as possible.
